About People We Know

J. B. Cox, member of Palm Beach county's educational staff, is "vacationing" this summer by spending a few days in the East Coast Railroad depot in West Palm Beach while they take their vacation. Cox is now in the Glades this week for a few hours on business and said he is enjoying his work. That his work agrees with him is proven by the fact that he has had 14 pounds weight, tipping the scale at a higher point than he has since 1926.

D. Elliott and John Bollinger, Palm Beach county's representatives-elect will go to Tampa this week-end where members of the 1945 session. Evans, four-time representative from Martin county, will be chosen speaker without opposition. The fight will center around the election of a speaker from the East Coast. There are half a dozen representatives in the race for the job of agricultural battle will be a hot one with few fireworks of the week end meeting.

C. G. Payne, Pahokee resident and former employee of the Sugar company at Anzac who made an unusual job as police chief in the May election, is wearing a badge in Belle Glade. Mr. Payne was named to the police force in Belle Glade and went to work the first day of the new year. His many years of experience in the law enforcement business should come in handy on his new job. He has a pleasant disposition and is known to be out of law enforcement work. He should make Belle Glade an excellent officer.

Anthony C. Libhart left Thursday morning to join his wife for a short vacation in the Catskills. They will visit his relatives in Pennsylvania before returning to Pahokee next month.

Nephew of Pahokee Folks Escapes Nazis in France

First Lt. Harold B. Carter, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Carter of Cordele, Ga., and nephew of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Poole of Pahokee, was one of the first U. S. Army paratroopers to land in France during the invasion. He was taken prisoner soon after landing but made his escape.

First Project Is Complete By Lions

The first project of the Pahokee Lions club under its new president, Roy Segree, was carried to successful conclusion Wednesday afternoon when a group of Lions, headed by Mr. Segree, painted the fence around the nursery in Pahokee. Sixteen Lions turned up for the afternoon's work. The project was furnished by a Pahokee man who desires no publicity, according to Carmen Salvatore, vice president.

Kilpatrick Goes To Sanford Bank

F. G. Kilpatrick, former cashier of the Bank of Pahokee and more recently cashier of the newly organized Okeechobee County Bank, took up his duties as vice president and cashier of the Florida State Bank at Sanford, Fla., today. Mr. Kilpatrick was one of the first to be named to the new bank, which was organized by the same group of men who organized the Pahokee Bank.

New Night Booth For City Policemen

Pahokee policemen on night duty won't be cheered up by the fact that the future night booth has been erected next to Otto Blech's office and will be equipped with a telephone. The new night patrolman have been subjected to the furious bites of the night insects between rounds of patroling but that day is gone.

Under the supervision of Chief Albert Gant a booth used in former days for airplane spotting will be turned into a night booth. A coat of white paint was given the booth yesterday by Mrs. Fraus.

State Market Road Will Be Rebuilt; SRD Calls For Bids

First tangible results have been realized from operation of the Pahokee-Canal Point Resources Development Board, according to Thurmond Knight, chairman of the highways committee of the board. Mr. Knight said that the State Road Department has authorized for bids on the piece of road between the light plant and the State Farmers market in Pahokee.

When the local board was organized several months ago and the highways committee, the first objective set up in the plan was this particular piece of road which will be rebuilt and maintained by the board.

Co. Commissioners Sound Death Knell Resources Board

The death knell for the Palm Beach County Resources Development Board was sounded Monday afternoon when the county commissioners adopted the 1945 budget after it had been stripped of an appropriation to finance the post-war planning organization. Members of the RDB decided on Tuesday afternoon to wind up their business and close the office on August 1, according to an announcement by J. J. Carter, president of RDB.

Members RDB had asked the commissioners for $19,500 for operation during the coming fiscal year. The commissioners turned down the request at an earlier meeting and the RDB received its request and sought only to add the new planning organization to the budget. The RDB was asked to be allowed to use a remaining $4,000 from the first appropriation.

The meeting Monday afternoon on Lake Lela, West Palm Beach, was a sad one. The RDB members had to say goodbye to the board. The RDB was asked to be allowed to use a remaining $4,000 from the first appropriation.

State Of Florida Has Greatest Cash Balance In History

TALLAHASSEE, July 27.—The state of Florida closed its fiscal year with a cash balance of $23,922,250, the greatest in history in its various operating funds. On top of that, more than $60,000,000 was tucked away as the close of business June 30 in the state treasury and investments for such things as the state retirement, unemployment compensation, servicing of county debt and bridge debt. The increased cash state buildings and highway construction.

Governor Holland and Comptroller J. M. Lee released the year-end figures in a joint report. Actual closing of the year broke a record for the state treasury. The state officials pointed out that just before the year ended, 2,000,000 in war bonds had been bought from state road department funds. The balance had then remained in cash the balance had then remained in cash the balance had then remained in cash.

The general revenue fund had a balance of $18,329,207 at the end of the year before. That is the end of the year before. That is the end of the year before. That is the end of the year before. That is the end of the year before. That is the end of the year before.

SHADY PAST

"I suppose your fiancé didn't tell you he was formerly engaged to me?"

"No, dear, but every man has something shady in his past."—Collier County News.

A BIG HELP

One of those starry-eyed female do-gooders was filling in at a USO booth in a railroad station when an excited G. I. bustled up.

"Hey, sister," he rattled off, "I gotta buy a ticket, say goodbye to a couple of friends, get my baggage and eat more lunch and my train leaves in five minutes. Could you help me out?"

"Oh, yes, yes," muttered the starry-eyed one. "You go ahead with the other things. I'll eat the lunch."—Investment Dealers' Digest.

FLORIDA'S FIGHTING MEN

Florida has contributed 106,500 men to the national army since the war began, and are fighting in all parts of the world. Also 1,893 women who are serving in army auxiliary services.

Our state's contribution to the army is equal to seven full divisions. The figures were given in a statement from headquarters of the fourth service command at Atlanta.

Other thousands of our men and women are serving in the navy. Florida is making a good war record.—Bradenton Herald.

SMALL BUSINESS IN RUSSIA

Soviet Russia permits the establishment of small businesses for profit as an aid toward reconstruction in areas liberated from the fascists. While it was never disallowed by law, not since the inception of the five year plan in 1928, has small business flourished in Russia.

Recently, the Kiev Pravda officially announced that any willing person may start a small business. Immediately several private enterprises sprang up while plans for others came in. In a socialist nation, this is a revolutionary tendency. While only a temporary expedient, the plan to allow business to exist for profit is based on individualist motives, rather than on Marxist collectivism.—Christian Science Monitor.

STAR GAZING

Meteors have appeared lately in the summer sky, flaming across the heavens by night and arousing wonder and fear among many observers. In olden times, with great wars in progress, such sights would have been regarded as significant portents. Astrologers would have pored their mystical books, trying to find in them the answers to our present problems and future fate.

But few people take such things seriously now. Science has dissipated the magic poetry and fear which attending such sights. The astrologers are gone, and in their place are astronomers, with scientific instruments rather than magic scrolls, who know where the comets come from, what they also where, are going. Also the stuff they are made of, and how much it weighs, and how long it will be until they are dissipated in space.

All in all, this is a more practical and scientific world. So much so that many people, with a little imagination, poetry and mystery still left in them, regret the hard-headed materialism they see all around. But there are still plenty of mysteries to be solved, for those who know where to look for them.—Sanford Herald.

MAINE ON THE LOBSTER QUESTION

Key West citizens are now advertising Maine lobsters as a Florida delicacy. We note this in an issue of the Key West Citizen of June 24. Yes, believe it or not, Maine chicken lobsters have invaded the home area and inner shrine of the famous Key West crawfish, which chambers of commerce throughout Florida boast and boast of as a native product. Crawfish, fight for your own, or you will find yourself forced to crawl north and spend your winter off the coast of Maine! Perhaps what you really need for added delicacy is just the forty cents for a Maine lobster. You are not utterly lost. Only substitute the tang of off-northern coast for the more rapid stimulus of lazy southern waters and you may yet find that Maine will turn her back on her own lobsters, and parise the glories and devour the substance of a revitalized crawfish.

Of course Mr. Crawfish, you will have to stir your stumps, bring that thing to pass. You will have to best the Maine lobster, and to do that you will have to be very good indeed. Consider the competition he is now giving you on your own ground. Maine has in Florida, the Idaho potato, the Idaho orange to Florida. It is like putting sugar on a Florida grapefruit in Florida.

It is like all of these things. Maine lobsters are like nothing else under the canopy of heaven. They fight for humanity, even in Florida. That is why they get transportation like a soldier.—Portland (Me.) Evening Star.

WE KNEW IT

"Robot planes" have been known in the United States since the last war, and are neither new, nor secret weapons, according to the national inventors council. At least to the national inventor's self-propelled aerial torpedoes similar to the German robot planes. In fact, the specifications for one of the planes invented by Americans indicate that it has some qualities which make it superior to the German weapon.

Lawrence Burt Sperry of the Sperry Gyroscope company filed application for a torpedo of the airplane type on April 18, 1918. The Sperry's flying torpedo utilized the principle of gyroscope stabilization.

The other inventor, post chairman of the national inventors council, was Dr. Charles F. Kettering, of the General Motors Research Corporation. He was granted a patent on application on Aug. 25, 1919, for the patent of "an aerial torpedo, that is, a self-propelled airplane carrying a large charge of explosives and having a control mechanism adapted so to direct its movement that it may be caused to travel over a desired path, and land upon a predetermined objective." The plans called for biplane type fuselage, driven by a two-cylinder motor operating a propeller.—Live Oak Democrat.

HINTS FOR SUMMER

Hot summer days are here again and the hazard of food poisoning is here again too. The four types of food listed last week by the state board of health are being responsible for 73 per cent of all food-borne gastric upsets were salad, particularly potato salad, cream pastries, fowl and ham.

The majority of food poisoning upsets are caused by a little germ which multiplies in grape-like clusters, and is popularly known as "Stella" Staphylococcus. "Stella" is a bacteria common to the human skin, and is found by the billions in discharge from the nose and throat. Therefore, people handling food should constantly scrub their hands and try to handle food as little as possible.

Relative refrigeration is by far the best way of controlling "Stella." Of course this is the best way to combat any bacteria, which does not multiply in low temperatures.

One of the reasons why fish poisoning is fairly rare is because most people realize that fish is highly perishable and therefore cook and eat it as soon as possible after taking it off the ice. If people were to be as careful about meat and fowl food poisoning would be reduced.

If meats are to be used for making sandwiches, slice only a small amount at one time and put the rest in a cold place at once. Bacteria will double in numbers every 30 or 40 minutes when food is exposed to warm temperature. If it is exposed for an hour the bacteria may have enough time to produce enough poison to give you a first-class gastric upset.—St. Petersburg Independent.

VACATIONS AS USUAL

When I walked into the office of a local printing concern recently, the owner greeted me from the desk ordinarily occupied by the business manager.

"I'm trying to get these accounts straightened up," said he, "before I go on a two weeks vacation. The man who sat at this desk for the past 20 years or more dropped dead last week. Worked too hard, always did, and his heart gave out."

"How can you take a vacation when you've just lost one of your chief clerks?" I asked him, because I had heard so many of my friends remark that this year they wouldn't be able to leave the business even for a week.

"May I can't afford it," replied this successful newspaperman, "that is, financially speaking, but you know the fellow who dropped dead last week always said he couldn't afford to take a vacation, either. I just figure that it couldn't have been me, and I don't intend to wear out my ticker like that."

Sometimes, the best advice you can give a man who has devoted all his energies to the operation and supervision of his business is to leave it alone for a while. Responsibilities weigh heavily on the management of every newspaper, and printing establishment these days for uncertainties and unexpected situations confront us at every turn. Advertising, although large in major cities has increased, is not too plentiful in the country town, and the manpower problems of large and small shops are similar. Prices are high, wages are high, supplies are high, and print paper of all kinds is scarce. In spite of the wartime prosperity of a large part of the population, the newspaper and printing business is not exactly a bonanza in these troublous times.

A few years ago when I was the publisher of three weekly newspapers, the prospect of spending the entire summer at business looked formidable before me. One of the men suggested that he be allowed to manage the properties for six weeks, and I took him to the Wall Street office. After that the fear of leaving the business in other hands never beset me, for the boys made more money in my absence than we ever had in a previous summer. That's how essential the summer is to the business of grandeur and presumption about your native ability and acquired skills, you may get over them by facing the hard truth that if you could not be at your desk tomorrow, someone else would take your place. Better let him take it for a few weeks this summer, while you and the misus relax and recreate the energies that a wartime winter has destroyed.—Charles L. Allen in The National Publisher.

TOO LATE TO CLASSIFY

by Russell Kay

Either our farmers as a class are an extremely unenterprising lot or they lack intelligence or some thing, otherwise they wouldn't be getting all the time over the benevolent activities of the Great White Father.

No government in the history of the world has ever established so many agencies designed to help the farmer as we enjoy under the present administration.

You know there was a time when a farmer, strictly on his own, used to have to do his planning. He had to figure out what to plant and how much. He had to finance himself and then go to the bother of buying seed, fertilizer and equipment. If he needed a hired man or two or a flock of laborers to help plant and harvest, he did the "hark" and the "fink". When it came to selling his produce, he sold it when or where or how he pleased. Some years he made a good profit and others he didn't. The bad years were generally offset by good years and if a freeze or a drought knocked him for a loop, he'd take it on the chin and try again, probably making enough on another crop to more than offset the loss.

His life was a gamble, it had its ups and downs but he managed to get along pretty well and was always admired for his faith, courage, initiative and enterprise. From the birth of the Nation he has stood as the living symbol of "Independence."

Of late years the picture has changed. Now the farmer finds himself "carded for" and "looked after" as diligently and enthusiastically as if he were a babe in arms. To-day his farm swarms with "mother's little helpers" who tell him when to plant, what to plant and how much to plant. His needs in the way of farm equipment and supplies are determined by a flock of college professors and university graduates who weigh themselves into a latter humped over a flat-topped desk or slumped in a chair in a conference room.

The only trouble with all this paternalism is that there are so many good folks "looking after" the farmer, all operating independently, that their efforts conflict. Two or three are concerned with "helping" him produce more and better crops. He is urged to "double" his yield, plant more food, raise more pigs and hatch more chickens. Others wishing to protect his market, insist that he plow under every third row. If he needs help to harvest a crop after it is produced the Employment Service will send him all the men he needs. But before any of these can reach him, another agency has taken them to a war plant or they are inducted in the armed services. The wild life bureau is busy protecting fish and game so he can go hunting and fishing for food, while another agency keeps him from accidentally shooting himself or deliberately committing suicide by not letting him have any shells for his gun. The marketing bureau helps him get a better market and make more money and the OPA puts a ceiling on his produce to keep him from having to pay too much for food tax. Another agency is struggling to provide him with tools and machinery while another is busy sending every available man, woman and tractor to Russia, or Timbuctoo. The Board of Health tries to keep him well and on the job and another bureau won't let him have a battery for his flashlight, so he falls and breaks his leg, losing the crop on a stormy night. For everything he can do there are as many more that he can't. There are a score of these countless boards or bureaus but what can prove the imperative need of its service and convince any reasonable people that without them, the food farmers would go broke in a week and starve to death.

I thought I had heard all the complaints and gripes the farmers could think up but last week I encountered a new one. A Late Linsey Farmer up in Pasco County claims he went ahead and raised more food crops like he was urged to do but the Government with its Chinacook HUI Sanctuary and the Willacoochee Land Project are raising and protecting so many chicken hawks, owls, opossums, wild cats, coons, and skunks that they've got all the biddies, eaten up his Victory Garden and left him at the point of starvation. He can't get shells to shoot them, or flashlight batteries to hunt 'em down at night, nor even rubber for a sling-shot and he's thrown every stone he can find on his place, but now he wants to know whether he should go on relying on or write his congressman in an effort to get some kind of a government job, where he can spend his time annoying other folks for a change and not have to worry himself to death trying to make an honest living.

When Actions Speak Louder

Than Words

The patriotic manner in which telephone men and women have carried on since Pearl Harbor speaks louder than words. When war started telephone workers were already in the midst of the greatest construction program ever undertaken. As war progressed their job grew more complicated. However, every war telephone service demand was met on or ahead of schedule, though it meant working long extra hours day after day.

While doing this tremendous war job, the urgent telephone needs of the public were not forgotten. There are today more than 500,000 more telephones in service in the Southern Bell territory than in 1940, and service is being maintained in spite of the fact that nearly one-third of our male employees are in the armed forces. Telephone operators are now completing more than 450,000 more calls each month than in the summer months of 1940.

Accepting their responsibilities as citizens, telephone folks have purchased millions of dollars of War Bonds and are continuing to invest more than ten per cent of their regular wages every month in bonds. You will find them doing Red Cross work—nurses' aid work—donating their blood—in fact you'll find telephone folks in nearly every civic movement designed to aid in our war effort and the betterment of the communities in which they live.

Telephone workers have accepted their wartime responsibilities, appreciating the vital part they have in the successful prosecution of the war—shouldering their tasks cheerfully and unselfishly as the men in arms should.

THE OLD JUDGE SAYS . .

"Mary and I were just saying, Judge, how lucky we are here in America that we have so many natural resources to help us in the war." "That's right, Jim. When war broke out we had oil, we had steel, we had food, lumber, aluminum, practically everything we needed. There's one thing we didn't have, rubber. The enemy had that." "But that didn't bother us for long. Soon American brains and industry had synthetic rubber by the ton rolling out of plants. They filled a critical need . . . you can't win a war without rubber."

"I was very much interested the other day in reading a statement made by a high government official on synthetic rubber. In it he said: 'It is far to regard the rubber manufactured to date as being almost solely the product of the beverage distilling industry.' "He advised that, in his estimation, the tremendous contribution of distillers' industrial alcohol to the synthetic rubber program had not received the recognition which it deserves." "We certainly learned something today, didn't we Mary?"

death claims a wealthy bridegroom on his wedding eve. He is mysteriously killing that proves the Falcon's most baffling and most fascinating case.

Speaking of Minor Watson, and this is going back. We worked together on the old Ed Hedman Stock Company out West when the moon was a scenic artist. But a poor one, and did minor parts. But he got his credit as a scenic artist piece of work. Minor had carried that experience, that art, right into the cinema with him, and you see in this above picture that he is one of the best character men in the business today—and he got his young.

Your Saturday show, which should be more than interesting to the members of the Six Shooters Club is "Texas to Babylon." It is a story that is quite different from the average Western picture and, with an excellent cast. I predict that it will be a jam up the show that will please all of the Saturday crowd.

Kicking the brakes loose for this week end chatter, the "gentleman" who ran his car off the high way on the Belle Glade road one night last week, in order to be quite sure that he wouldn't miss a little dog, did a fine piece of work. He should be proud of his accomplishment—it's something going down the highway, killing a dog that is off the "right-of-way" and Minding His Own Business! See you at the movies—Mal.

From A Window In Vagabond's House

Through special permission Russell Kay of Florida News Service is able to provide us with the following inspiring column written by Florida's beloved author artist and poet, Don Blanding:

In these days when all of us who have been into the great life-robbers of the Blood Banks, and turning our money into War Bonds and lending our time and energy to the common cause of humanity and our fighting forces, we must also share or give that other plasma which is faith, passing it along to others who under the bludgeoning of fate, may be faltering or lost in the fog of despair, bewilderment and especially sorrow which is increasingly a part of our living now.

It is not easy to reveal the intimate and dear things of one's heart for all to see, and yet this common need urges that we do this very thing, if the message we have seems to have the plasma of hope in it.

I am passing along an intimate and splendid thing which was said to me by one I loved when with all of the courage we could muster we faced the inevitable and swiftly approaching separation which a malignant illness forced upon us. The words which were spoken to me were such a challenge and comfort that I would indeed be selfish to keep them to myself when the need is so great for just such sincere messages.

I was told then: "Above all things I ask that you do not grieve, and long for me. You know that I would turn back from the gates of Heaven and walk barefoot through Hell to be with you and near you if you needed me or called for me. We do not know a great deal about life after this event called 'death.' We try and believe that we go on somewhat as we are here with a little more understanding, working toward some far fine goal which is revealed to us when we are capable of seeing it. But again I ask, do not grieve bitterly nor long back to the presence of those we love. I shall come back. But if I do, your awareness of my presence makes you sad and then I would have to go away, and I would be a very lonely ghost, indeed.

"In life I wanted to bring happiness to you; death could not change that desire. So, if you think that you feel my nearness, remember quickly and with all your strength all of the joyous things we shared; turn swiftly to the picture album of joy memory and recall the happiest days, the dearest hours of laughter, and the tender shared things which make human association so dear. If you can do this, then I can get passports through that strange No-Man's land which we think about so much and actually know so little of. I will come often and happily. Remember what I have asked you. I did remember these words, I followed them as best I could. They were words of great wisdom and foresight. Not only at the time did they exercise the grim phantoms which crowd about but drove them away forever in my thinking.

It is not with the dark flowers of sorrow that we honor those whom we have loved, and whom we have loved us dearly. It is rather by planting the seeds of valiant and courageous happiness which we may share with others that we make the true victory gardens of the spirit.

I hope that this taleman of courage which was given to me will serve you if you have need of it now or in the days ahead.

Growers Watch Plane Shipments

TAMPA, July 27. — (FNS) — Florida's shippers of perishable fruits and vegetables are watching with keen interest, the first Boeing transport plane which will ship fruits from California to Michigan. The experiments are being conducted by Wayne University, and are expected to save time and money.

Plum, nectarine, peach, cherry, apricot, and figs are included in express shipments by air and these fresh tree-ripened fruits reach the consumer within twenty-four hours of the time they are picked.

The University is making a study to determine the volume and sugar content, determination and weight loss, affecting such shipments. Dr. Spencer A. Larsen, Director of Air Cargo Research of Wayne University stated that all phases of the marketing procedure will be studied.

Sees Horror Of Centralized Control

ORLANDO, July 27. — (FNS) — In a talk to local Kiwanians here this week, Harry Voorhis, prominent attorney declared that "If Washington continues to establish bureaus we are apt to find our supply of alphabetized combinations exhausted." He points out that there are 2,241 known bureaus already in existence and others being created almost daily.

Condemning the practice of turning to the federal government for financial aid and handouts, a dangerous practice, Voorhis, contends that such action simply means greater centralized control and regulations and the creation of more bureaus to supervise activities within the state.

Seminole Grower Says Celery Ceiling By OPA Is Too Low

SANFORD, July 27. — (FNS) — State Representative L. B. Mash, one of Seminole County's oldest growers of celery and other vegetables, after analyzing the OPA ceiling price on celery declares that $2.25 per crate is "unfair" and based on the cost of production two or three years ago.

Mash calls attention to the fact that hundreds of acres of celery were plowed under in the area because regulations prevented growers from harvesting profitably. He estimates actual loss of operations on the part of local growers by close to $300,000.

Mr. Mash and materials men, states, have increased two or three times what they were when the OPA national ceiling was set, on which the present ceiling price is based.

To Prepare Book On State Resources

TALLAHASSEE, July 27. — (FNS) — J. Colin English, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, announced this morning the formation of an advisory committee on education concerning Florida's resources, whose first duty will be to prepare a blueprint for use in junior and senior high schools.

Dr. W. H. Matthews of the Florida State College for Women named chairman of the advisory group. Other members are Devery Hooper, executive secretary of the State Planning Board; D. E. Browning, President of the Florida Educational Association; C. E. Storde, principal of the Sarasota High School; Dr. W. W. Little, Dean of the General College of the State University; Dr. Don Campbell, president of FSCW; Dr. Charles R. Foster, dean of the education school, University of Miami; and Dr. W. T. Edwards and D. E. Williams of the State Department of Education.

Veterans Placed By USES Group

TALLAHASSEE, July 27. — (FNS) — The United States Employment Service placed 1,226 veterans in suitable jobs in Florida for the month of June, R. A. Raso, State Director of the War Manpower Commission announced today. Of this number, 904 were World War I veterans and 322 were World War II veterans. "In this figure of placement 404 were physically handicapped."

"There were 284 less placements of veterans by the United States Employment Service in Florida for June than there were for May," said Mr. Raso, "which is an indication that discharges from the services are decreasing."

Railroad Tries Out Radio Control

MIAMI, July 27. — (FNS) — The results were obtained in a test run, completed recently which employed radio communication between the engine and the caboose of the freight train operated over the Seaboard Airline Railroad, Richmond, Virginia, to Miami, Florida.

The Seaboard is looking into the possibility of providing radio communication over its entire system, not only for the dispatching of trains, but also for such other purposes as may be practically desirable.

The proudest title in the Army

IT CONSISTS OF two simple words.

Yet every soldier who's worth his salt covets it.

This title is simply:

"Good Soldier."

It isn't just happenstance that so many women in the WAC have earned this title—the proudest in the Army.

For wherever Wacs are working, both here and overseas, there you find a job well done. And done with a spirit so gallant and fine that high Army officers everywhere say of the WAC...

"They're soldiers. Good soldiers!"

Good soldiers...
